

Prior to the NJ Do Not Call act, many senior citizens were turning off their phones because the frequent telemarketer's calls were causing them to make unneeded trips to their phones - often with difficulty due to physical limitations. The NJ act ended this invasion of privacy and allowed them to turn their phones back on and use them for all the useful purposes a telephone fulfills. Do not allow this important consumer right and essential element of our quality of life to be diluted or removed. Thank you for your consideration of this request.
